A northern Wisconsin man who faked his own suicide so he could escape prosecution for his daughter's murder pleaded guilty Thursday to first-degree intentional homicide and child enticement. Andrew Kolb entered the plea in court in Dunn, about 75 miles north of the Bad River Reservation. He faces up to life in prison when he is sentenced on March 4.

Kolb, 37, appeared emotionless in court and responded to the judge with "Yes, your honor" when she asked if he understood the terms of his plea. In December, Kolb pleaded not guilty to first-degree intentional homicide and second-degree sexual assault for the 2010 murder of his 8-year-old daughter Madeline. Her body was found wrapped in a blanket in a suitcase in a rural area of the city of Menomonie. In a police interview, Kolb admitted to stuffing the girl's body in a suitcase and placing it in his vehicle, but said she was alive when he left her at a house. Kolb had initially told police he killed his daughter to protect his wife, who had a gambling addiction. He initially told authorities that he did not hurt his daughter, but police were skeptical because the girl's body showed signs of sexual assault, according to a criminal complaint. Kolb was arrested later that year after a concerned citizen reported him to police and said the girl's body had been sitting in his garage for years. Kolb's father-in-law told investigators he drove him to the house to clean up, and Kolb said the second time he picked up the suitcase from the house, he put it in his truck and "tossed it in the bushes." In a police interview, Kolb said he didn't know whether the girl was alive or dead when he threw the suitcase in the woods. He added that he took the girl out of the house because he knew he would be arrested if he left her there, police said. or person seeking help. 3. Off-Topic Chat We try to keep
